

INTERIOR DESIGN®

AUGUST 2019

stand up for art

standing ovation

Let's hear it for the winners of this year's CODAwards for international art and design

Dedicated to fostering the commissioned-art economy, CODAworx is an online platform that stands for Collaboration of Design + Art and connects artists, designers, and fabricators with potential clients. For the past seven years, the organization has presented the CODAwards, a global competition celebrating the best of these collaborations. This year's 18-member jury, including Interior Design editor in chief Cindy Allen and Hall of Fame members Alexandra Champalimaud, Robin Klehr Avia, and Mark Zeff, reviewed 435 entries from 27 countries, representing nearly $118 million in site-specific commissions. Winners and honorees have been awarded in 10 categories, such as hospitality, liturgical, and transportation. Additionally, two People's Choice prizes were determined by over 60,000 public votes, almost 10,000 more than last year. Here are some of our favorites. —Georgina McWhirter

DAVID AND ELI HESS Broad Reach, winner of the landscape category, is composed of a pair of stainless-steel sculptures on grass berms at Wilmer Park in Chestertown, Maryland. ➤

interiordesign.net/coda19 for all category winners and honorees

MARC FORNES/THEVERYMANY The public space winner, Boolean Operator, is a painted-aluminum pavilion in Suzhou, China.

UNITEDLAB At the Space of Design and Architecture museum in Hwaseong, South Korea, Cloud Forests, a children's play installation made of painted PVC poles and balloons, is the institutional category's budget winner.

CODA awards

CLB ARCHITECTS Town Enclosure, 22 13-foot-high panels of spruce-pine-fir arranged as a temporary community hub in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, is a landscape honoree.

